HMC FARMS – ABOUT US

The McClartys, a fifth-generation farming family, have been growing fruit on the same land since 1887. HMC Farms is a vertically integrated grower, packer, and shipper of tree fruit and table grapes in California's San Joaquin Valley.

We pioneered grapes for foodservice with the introduction of Lunch Bunch® portioned grapes in 1979. Since then we've spent more than 40 years developing value-added solutions that simplify grapes for foodservice: On-stem, off the stem, in single-serve packages or bulk.

Environment & Social Responsibility

Our family has passed down vineyards and orchards for five generations. Today, we grow fruit on over 6,000 acres. Our methods of sustainable and regenerative farming are continuously evolving in order to ensure that our land and resources are protected.

Integrated pest management, lab analyses of soil & tissue samples, and regenerative agricultural practices such as cover crops and compost application help maintain healthy soil for our trees and vines. HMC is one of the largest adopters of solar power in the industry, with enough solar panels to generate more than 3 megawatts of renewable solar energy. Our irrigation has shifted from flood to drip to allow precision watering.

Harold's expertise has led to multiple industry leadership roles and accolades. We believe in supporting our industry and local community. From education and food bank partnerships to an employer-sponsored health clinic for employees, we are passionate about support the individuals in our communities.
